Creating an enabling environment for women’s economic empowerment contributes to economic growth, alleviation of poverty and improves the well-being of women. To achieve meaningful development, we need to move beyond legislation and policy by undertaking specific measures aimed at ensuring women can cope/adapt to the changing world of work. Financial inclusion can be achieved through key affirmative action programmes that lead to the promotion of women’s participation in male dominated industries while ensuring that they embrace technology and digital change in their enterprises. In the fast-changing world of work, women need to adapt to the areas that present great opportunities for social and economic transformation. Join Kenya’s delegation to the 61st Session of the Commission on the Status of Women in a discussion on:

- policies and legislation necessary to support women in traditional sectors including those that support inclusion of women in non-traditional sectors;
- Measures required that are required to support an enabling environment for women in the changing world of work including the initiatives under implementation and their impact?
- How the digital platform is being used to ensure women embrace technology in the changing world of work;
- The role of private sector in advancing women’s economic empowerment including participation in the non-traditional sector?

*RSVP: divayancey@kenyaun.org (please indicate whether you will need ground passes to access the United Nations Conference Rooms).