NCDs have been the leading causes of death among women globally for the past three decades and now NCDs account for nearly 65% of female deaths worldwide.

Join us to hear from member states and experts about the opportunities for enhancing integration, linkages and synergies between NCDs and sexual and reproductive health programmes to ensure holistic healthcare for women and adolescent girls. There will be perspectives on effective multistakeholder partnerships and collaborations that bridge efforts on NCDs and sexual and reproductive health. In addition to speakers from Zambia, Denmark, UN Women, UNAIDS, and WHO, panellists include representatives from National Geographic and Partners In Health.
