

The Right to Social Security in Unpaid Care Work

Friday, March 15

10:00-11:15 a.m

United Nations Headquarters, New York, Conference Room "A"

Simultaneous Translation

Given that social security systems are commonly structured around full-time participation in the workforce, millions of women engaged partially or exclusively in unpaid care work are denied or limited this right in practice. In this side event we will explore policy recommendations from the Uruguayan and Mexican experiences as well as recent advances from the Committee of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to expand social security in unpaid care work.
